Persistence

The system will communicate with a local SQL database using the SQLite library through SQLite ORM. All data will be stored on the database and retrieved on application startup. The application will directly communicate with the database through a 2-tiered client-server architecture. Each database entry object is responsible for updating and fetching new data whenever a change happens.